

The Delaware Riverkeeper Network has an extensive library of videos available on youtube.com to help you learn about the issues related to fracking, gas transmission, watershed degradation and community action opposing the PennEast Pipeline.

See the link below or search Delaware Riverkeeper Network on youtube.com:

<http://bit.ly/10MzmyS>

A few examples from the video library:

Pipeline Lessons Segment 1 SAFETY: Safety expert Richard Kuprewicz discusses the questions local officials and property owners should ask if they are facing a pipeline installation.

Pipeline Lessons Segment 2 REGULATION: Michelle Adams, a civil engineer discusses how pipelines and the shale gas industry face weaker regulatory standards than other types of developments. She also looks at the impact of those differences on the environment.

Pipeline Lessons Segment 3 CITIZEN ACTION: Delaware Riverkeeper Maya van Rossum provides information on strategies citizens can take when a pipeline route is proposed in their town.

I CRY FOR MY TREES: George Feighner, wept today (2/16) as 70-year old white pines were clearcut less than 100 feet from his front door by pipeline contractors who started cutting yesterday morning after receiving a Notice to Proceed from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission on Thursday (2/4). George is an 87-year old man in Montague, NJ living just off the banks of the Delaware River.

www.delawariverkeeper.org

Find these videos and more at www.youtube.com

